Are you ready for another LaNina winter?

Forecasters are predicting another LaNina winter in the Northwest – colder temperatures with more snow – which can make commuting difficult. A good way to keep informed of extreme weather conditions in Bellevue, including driving conditions and road closures, a snow priorities map, emergency tips and phone numbers, is to visit the city’s website at www.bellevuewa.gov and click on the Extreme Weather Response button on the far right. You can also sign up for email alerts to get notified when the page is updated.

Be prepared: Before driving in snow or ice, it’s a good idea to check conditions and snow routes and prepare your vehicle. Have warm clothes, water, a cell phone and other items in your car in case you get stuck. Give snowplows plenty of room to work and watch out for black ice on bridges, ramps and shady areas.

City crews follow a plan: Citywide and neighborhood priority routes are cleared first to accommodate fire, medical and police response, transit, schools buses and commuter traffic. After that, secondary streets are cleared. If snow continues, plows may need to continue working on priority routes. View the priority ranking of streets citywide using Bellevue’s snow response priorities map at http://www.bellevuewa.gov/pdf/Transportation/snow_response_priorities_map.pdf

To check the condition of city streets in real time, see the city’s network of intersection cameras and the online traffic map at http://trafficmap.cityofbellevue.net
Can your neighbors keep you safe – and warm?

It’s a great feeling to know that your neighbor would come to your aid in an emergency – she would watch your kids, he would loan you a vehicle, etc. When the weather turns bad, that neighborly interaction becomes more important than ever.

For some residents, extreme weather changes everything. They may have no heat when the power goes off; they may have no water if their pipes break; they may be unable to pick up needed medications. Your neighbors may not have access to information about cold weather shelters, or they may have difficulty finding help due to illness, disability or language barriers. At times like this, neighborhood connections are vital.

Some Bellevue neighborhoods have plans for helping one another during bad weather. They may share rides, or loan out equipment like snow shovels. They may keep track of who has generators or gas water heaters and would be willing to let neighbors warm up. Some neighborhoods have a plan for checking on elderly residents, and some individuals take responsibility for ensuring the welfare of certain at-risk neighbors. One Crossroads area resident called it “Take Five” – take responsibility for checking on five neighbors. The phrase – and the approach -- have taken hold, and some agencies are now promoting it.

The key is knowing your neighbors – not just saying a quick hello at the mailbox, but knowing who would need help, or who would help you, when needs arise. One way to build connections is to create a neighborhood directory – a phone list that can be embellished with key information about your neighbors. Neighborhood Outreach has a tip sheet for helping neighborhoods create their own directories at http://www.bellevuewa.gov/pdf/Neighborhoods/Neighborhood_Directory_Tips.pdf. Or take a look at the list of ideas generated by local residents for strengthening neighborhood connections: http://www.bellevuewa.gov/pdf/Neighborhoods/Discussion_Groups.pdf.

If you have a tip or idea for helping neighbors help each other – particularly in extreme weather conditions – share it with others by e-mailing NeighborhoodOutreach@bellevuewa.gov.

Garden d’Lights opens this month

More than half a million lights will transform the Bellevue Botanical Garden into a blossoming winter wonderland again this year, beginning Saturday, Nov. 26. Garden d’Lights, sponsored by the Bellevue Botanical Garden Society, will burst into bloom every evening from 5 to 10 p.m. through Dec. 31.

To visit the popular annual display:

- Purchase tickets in advance at the web site or at The Trillium gift shop. (Event admission is $5 per person; children 10 and under are free.) The shop, which features gift items and holiday décor, is open from 5 to 9:30 p.m., and Tuesdays and Thursdays from noon to 3 p.m.
- Get all event, parking and other details at http://www.gardendlights.org.
Inspired by plants found in Northwest gardens, hundreds of volunteers work year round to bundle strings of lights into three dimensional flowers, shrubs, and vines. In addition to artistic interpretation of plants, the display includes animal characters, including Charlotte the spider in her web near the Ground Cover Garden and the newest member of the menagerie in Yao Garden.

Anyone interested in learning the secrets of these flower creations can register for a class at www.bellevuebotanical.org or by calling 425-451-3755. All flowers created in classes are added to the Garden d'Lights display.

City considers change in Neighborhood Business (NB) zone

Meeting on Oct. 17, the City Council initiated a process to amend the Land Use Code to provide better support for uses in some of the City’s neighborhood shopping centers. The City will look at the NB zone (Neighborhood Business) and assess whether additional uses should be allowed and whether some of the existing size limitations should be adjusted. Currently, for example, apparel stores are not allowed in the NB zone and retail uses are limited to 3,000 square feet. Adjusting some of these standards could help attract new tenants to vacant spaces at the Newport Hills Shopping Center and could improve the health and stability of other neighborhood business locations.

The Council directed staff to consider focusing the amendments on those neighborhood business areas greater than three acres in size, which includes Northtowne, Bel-East, and Newport Hills. Staff will be working with members of the three neighborhoods to review what changes to the Land Use Code might be appropriate. Draft concepts will also be reviewed with the Planning Commission on Nov. 16. A public hearing will be held once draft amendments have been prepared. The City Council will make the final decision on whether to adopt any amendments.

Position still open on regional housing board

Applications are still being accepted for a vacant position on the Citizen Advisory Board for ARCH (A Regional Coalition for Housing). The board consists of 12-15 community residents and housing professionals who work to evaluate funding proposals and increase awareness of housing issues on the Eastside. Typically meeting one Wednesday evening per month, board members contribute their understanding of housing and community issues, as well as certain specialized perspectives including real estate, housing development, planning, finance, assisting persons with low income or special needs, faith community, racial diversity, architecture and residents of affordable housing. More information about ARCH and the ARCH Citizen Advisory Board is on the website: www.archhousing.org To apply contact Arthur Sullivan at 425-861-3677 or asullivan@bellevuewa.gov

Culture takes the stage at Crossroads

For three days in November, Bellevue Crossroads Shopping Center will be a whirl of multicultural entertainment and educational events. The 21st Annual Cultural Crossroads will feature music, dance, exhibits and cuisines from around the world. An international bazaar will offer multicultural goods and gifts for sale. Sponsored by the Ethnic Heritage Council, the event is scheduled Nov. 4-6. Hours are Friday 5-10 p.m., Saturday 10 a.m.- 10 p.m., and Sunday 10 a.m.-6 p.m.

Also in Crossroads this month – The Cultural Conversations group will gather to talk about “Flavors of Diversity” – how the concepts of food, meals, and dining are shaped by different cultures. This women’s group meets regularly at Crossroads Community Center, and welcomes guests and newcomers. The next meeting is Tuesday, Nov. 8, from 1 to 2:30 p.m. For more information contact Neighborhood Outreach at 425-452-6836 or NeighborhoodOutreach@bellevuewa.gov.
